The Greatcoat Helen Dunmore

The Greatcoat. A terrifyingly atmospheric ghost story by the Orange-prize-winning Helen Dunmore. In the summer of 1954, newly wed Isabel Carey arrives in a Yorkshire town with her husband Philip. As a GP he spends much of his time working, while Isabel tries hard to adjust to the realities of married life.

The Greatcoat by Helen Dunmore - Goodreads

Helen Dunmore has set The Greatcoat in the year of her birth in an area she grew up in, and based it on a ghostly apparition seen by sister when they were children. I found her author's note at the end of the book really interesting, where she talks about society's need to "rebuild and to begin again" after the war, so that the dead were almost forgotten and not talked about.

A man in a greatcoat..." The 'wrinkle in time' means that the local airbase, a ruin in 1952, is once again a hub of activity. Isabel seems to be morphing into the woman whom Alec the airman was seeing back in the War. It's a slightly confusing plotline, but one that Helen Dunmore manages to handle.
