Kate Furnivall | THE ITALIAN WIFE

The Italian Wife is a novel by Kate Furnivall set in the 1930's when Mussolini's ambition for a modern Italy was all consuming. Isabella Berotti fought though loss and despair to become an architect bringing Il Duce's dream of building new towns the Pontine Marshes into reality.

The Italian Wife by Kate Furnivall - Goodreads

Her previous efforts are so superior that this one simply falls short of expectations. It is edifying and instructive, but the story itself, and the characters in it, are left undeveloped and a bit sketchy. The Italian Wife just isn't near as skillful and complete as Furnivall's other books. Read more.

Meantime, returning to The Italian Wife it's clear that Kate Furnivall does first-class research. My own research confirmed that under fascist Mussolini, five new towns were built between 1932 and 1939 on the Pontine Plain, southwest of Rome, and that by 1933 upwards of 124,000 labourers were engaged in draining the marshes, and constructed some 10,000 miles of ditches and canals.

Kate Furnivall | US Editions

Kate Furnivall didn't set out to be a writer. It sort of grabbed her by the throat when she discovered the story of her grandmother - a White Russian refugee who fled from the Bolsheviks down into China. That extraordinary tale inspired her first book, The Russian Concubine. From then on, she was hooked.
